

On April 27, 2015, Mr. Nakayama, AAI staff member, delivered a special lecture on Syria to the class of International Cooperation and Support, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Jissen Women's University. As the lecture consisted of a variety of wide-ranging topics, such as the life of Syrians, environmental problems, the impact of the Arab Spring in Syria and refugees, it was a joint lecture with Ms. Nishimura, who has been engaged in the assistance of refugees out of Syria, as an NGO staff member.

The School Corporation Jissen Women's Educational Institute has this class in International Cooperation and Support as part of a joint effort between Jissen Joshi Gakuen Senior High school and Jissen Women's University. Students from both the university and the senior high school participated in the class with great interest and asked a number of questions regarding Syria afterwards.
